English Politics.

The political event of the week is the sudden change which has taken place in England. The Liberal ministry had so often escaped defeat during the trying periods of Egyptian and Afghanistan complications that their downfall at this time was quite unexpected. That it should result from their policy of raising additional revenue by the imposition of a new tax on beer would seem to indicate that English sentiment is chiefly of the pocket order. Humiliation to the Empire is not so much resented as drafts upon the exchequer. Perhaps the shiftings of foreign policy were due as much to changes of public opinion as to the hesitation of the ministry. Dissensions in the Cabinet over the renewal of the Irish Coercion acts are said to have tempered the miseries of defeat to the fallen leaders. The Earl of Salisbury has concluded to accept office at a time of great uncertainty, when heavy responsibilities are certain to fall upon the government. The details of the agreement with Russia are to be completed; the heavy war expenses already incurred must be provided for; the nationalist members of the Irish home-rule party must be satisfied, and provision must be made for carrying out the details of the agreement by which two million voters are to be added to the electoral constituency. Upon the eve of a new election the Conservatives must act in such a way as to command the confidence of a mass of new voters of whose wishes they are as yet uncertain. The advantages of the situation are apparently with the Liberals.

The Schools.

The Commencement season with its hosts of graduates, its orations, music, and good advice will inevitably provoke anew the discussion of the practicability of our modern systems of education. This we do not propose to discuss, but merely to notice the drift of matters as they appear upon the surface. In the colleges there is considerable reaction from the old system of classics. Men destined for mechanical labors are afforded larger choice. Scientific studies are more rigidly followed. New branches are constantly added; preparations are making for post-graduate courses in every field of research. It is evident that the future college gradnate is to be not either a lawyer, doctor, or minister, but to follow any one of a thousand directions in his lifework. The complexity of modern life is recognized, and provision is to be made for it. Columbia and Harvard are especially organized on this basis. In either the faculty has been largely increased, with new apparatus and appliances. Such an extension means that America will soon be able to supply the instruction for which it has long been necessary to seek the advantage of European universities.

Industrial Schools are also to be organized. In Massachusetts these have for some time been in successful operation. They are much needed. The abrogation of the old system of apprenticeship makes them necessary, as does also the increasing value and beauty of our manufactured products. The provisions made by the legislature of New Jersey can as yet hardly be said to have been utilized. A small beginning has however been made in Newark; perhaps, in other places. As an adjunct to our system of common schools, it will no doubt be successful in the larger manufacturing centres.

The high school system still remains. It is doing better work than ever. Its graduates are increasing, and the general interest in reading and study increases. The growth of an educated public opinion is one of the most encouraging signs of the times. Men are found in every town liberally educated, facile with the pen, capable speakers, with an adequate knowledge of literature, politics, and religious literature. Such a class is invaluable in its influence on the industries of the nation, its morals and good government.

Every where the tendency is in the direction of better schools; more practical, complex, and thorough work. For these the people were never more willing to contribute large sums in the way of taxation, and the system is justified by its fruits.

Police.

The recent burglaries should call the attention of the public again to a great need of this village, and that is, better police protection.

As matters stand at present not more than two peace officers are deputed to patrol the town at night, keep the corners free from loafers and protect the whole population of some seven thousand from the depredations of thieves.

Were this some country village in the interior, remote from large cities, even this number might not be needed, but for a town of this size, within fourteen miles of New York, and four of Newark, in the center of a large manufacturing district, the number is grossly inadequate.

This town is in reality no more than a suburb of New York or Newark, and were the limits of these cities extended as much as those of western cities, this town would be a ward in one of them, and would be regularly patrolled, and the city that did not thus provide police protection for its outlying wards, would be considered grossly negligent of the interests of its citizens.

In what material respect is our situation different from what it would be if we were a ward of Newark? The distance from the city is not increased; the imaginary line separating the town from the city is no effectual barrier to keep out the thief; he does not even respect our unprotected condition, but whenever it suits him to escape the heat of the city, he seeks the green fields of the suburbs, and preys upon our innocent and unsuspecting citizens.

Some may say that the total cost of all the burglaries heretofore committed in this village would not equal the cost of one year's policing of the town.

That may be so, but laying aside the obvious answer, that it is not fair that the loss should fall on a few, and that if that view is taken the town should reimburse the sufferers, and neglecting wholly the moral aspect of the case, the answer is conclusive that it is better to lock the door while the horse is still in the stable, than after he is stolen; that while we have suffered little as yet, before long a big robbery may cost more than many years' policing.

This matter should be seriously considered, and some action taken that will insure a reasonable degree of safety from these midnight depredations.

The hearts of the American People will follow the fortunes of their hero, General Grant, to his retreat at Mount McGregor, near Saratoga, New York. A special train made up of palace cars was placed at his disposal by the New York Central Road, and all preparations have been made for his comfort at his journey's end. Whatever money and kind attentions can do will be done to smooth the path of the dying hero. There seems but slight prospect of his recovery. Yet the results of this change will be awaited with interest. The reminiscinces of the war, lately published with the advance sheets of General Grant's Autobiography, have awakened new interest in him and his conquests. His memoirs show the respect felt by him for the conquered South, who now are able to partially requite him by the sympathy displayed in his suffering.

ON THE ENGINE.

Running a Locomotive While Deathly Sick—Something the Passengers Did not know—A Physician Saves an Engineer.

TAUNTON, MASS.

Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.:

Dear Sir: I am an engineer on the Old Colony Railroad, and run the Fall River boat train between Fall River and Lowell, residing in Taunton. For ten years I suffered every but death from dyspepsia. Often I had such binding sick headaches that I could scarcely see. I think this was due partly to irregular habits of eating, and partly to the jar of the engine. Sometimes my head would snap like neuralgia, and again the pain would settle in my eyes, which would feel as big as a man's fists. My breath was very offensive, and my food soured as soon as it entered my stomach. In fact my stomach felt as though it were a great raw and sore surface, and what agony it gave perhaps you can imagine.

In the summer and fall of 1876, when we had the heavy centennial travel, the constant jar brought on acute attacks nearly every week and I thought I should have to leave the road. But I kept at work until the next spring, when I grew so much worse that I could virtually eat nothing, and concluded that my labor, and my life too, were about over.

Remember that I had tried every medicine I heard of, and had been treated by some of the best physicians in Taunton and Lowell. At this critical time DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY was recommended to me. It was new to me, and with my experience of medicines, you can easily forgive me for saying that I had not a particle of faith in it.

I had taken it but a few days when I began to get better. The raw and sore feeling left my stomach, and the snapping pains left my head, and soon I was all right, and have been ever since. It is the only thing that ever did me the least good, and it drove every ache, pain and discomfort completely out of my body. Now I keep KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY with me on my engine, and it goes wherever I go.

Why, I believe FAVORITE REMEDY will cure anything. One night, a while ago, John Layton, an engineer who runs the main line boat train from Boston, came on my engine sick as death. He was worn out with work, had a high fever, and was so nervous he almost broke down crying. "Nonsense, John," I said, "cheer up, I've got something on my engine that will set up in a jiffy." I took out my bottle of FAVORITE REMEDY, lifted his head and gave him a good dose. He went to bed. Two days after I saw him looking healthy as a butcher. "Dan," he said, "what was that stuff you gave me the other night?" "It was DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, Rondout, N. Y.," said I. "Well, I don't care whose Remedy it is, it's the thing for a man on the railroad." So say we all.

Yours, etc., DANIEL FITTS.

This preparation goes to the root of disease by purifying the blood and rousing every organ into healthy action. It is useful at home, shop, in office—everywhere.
